Forgotten Books, United States, 2015. Paperback. Book Condition: New. 229 x 152 mm. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand . Excerpt from State Normal Magazine, Vol. 22: June, 1918 The students are thinking about world affairs and are expressing their patriotism at home. They are taking over some of the work of men about the place, who are no longer about the place. They volunteered to mow the campus for commencement. They had set apart for each class certain afternoons and certain sections of the campus for keeping them cleaned up. Following commencement, ten girls started work for the summer on the college farm, while the rest are going out into the state to do serious, constructive work during their vacation. Thus have we changed, thus have we grown. But the listening ear of the modern spirit is still bent down close over the strings on which the college spirit finds expression, and is still testing, testing to see if it will ring true. We have not yet found ourselves, and the world is still expectant. The cry has gone up all over the country for War Gardens and everywhere, people are answering. Shouldering a hoe and...
