Excerpt: . . . strength would not be perfect, so the reduction in variability longer poles that are likely to fail further away from ground-1 2 would not be as large as 1 3. Second, the basis for the line and to exhibit a lower groundline stress at failure. variability factor ( 0. 92 ) was a lack of confidence in the While standard tests provide a means of assessing relative data. The adjusted value was the committees estimate of value between species and pole sizes, they rarely address mean performance for green poles that met their minimum all design issues. In the case of wood poles, DFS values used specifications, and should not have been included in the to set pole size class include some adjustment to account expression. Finally, load sharing is an engineering judgment, for effects of high temperature conditioning and drying not a material property, and has little meaning in a material in service. specification. Conditioning It does not appear that the NESC, which provided design recommendations on the basis of the ASA pole strength Preservative treatments are what make wood a viable option values, treated these values as though they were lower frac-for use as poles. Their effect on strength is therefore of vital tiles. It was standard practice at the time for timber engineer-concern to pole producers. Many studies conducted to assess ing standards to recommend design values as 25 of the treatment effects on strength have concluded that any mean strength....
